Dear Dr. Wirasinghe

Thank you for the wonderful seminar on “decision-Making” that you delivered to our team.

Being in Professional Development I am continually approached by consultants with products or messages that they want to share. Because of this I was initially reluctant to offering an unknown program to our staff. However, within a few minutes of speaking with you, I was convinced that you had a valuable message.

The team I thought would benefit from this program was my team of 41 TAKs Instructional Specialists. But when my Executive Director for Curriculum saw the material, she instructed me to include the other specialists as well.

I am so glad we placed our faith in you. The message was relevant and the messenger showed expertise, and a terrific passion for the subject.

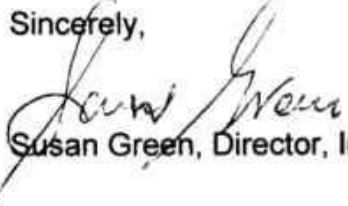

I recall your concern that a large group of 80+ attendees might distract you from giving the personal attention that you usually give to the attendees. Yet, I was impressed by the way you kept an eye on all of them. Yes, a 7-hour seminar is demanding on anyone; especially the instructor; but your passion to deliver your message never dimmed. You kept the team engaged at all times. I was pleased that the Specialists participated with questions, and even ventured to question you. Even after the presentation ended, many of the Specialists chose to stay behind to ask questions and offer suggestions as to who else need to participate in future presentations.

As instructional specialists, a constant issue of concern has been on how they “sell” their ideas and recommendations to their “clients” – the Principals and Teachers. Your seminar addressed this very well, and gave the Specialists a renewed confidence. I am certain we will benefit from what we have learned.

In the coming weeks I will be proposing to our district that we consider expanding your program to include our teachers, counselors, coaches, principals, and administrators, and most of all students who are seniors, who will be making serious decisions, every day.

Errol, on behalf of my team at Klein Independent School district, I extend our sincere thanks for the work you did for us, and your commitment to educating the educators, so that we in turn can do a better job of guiding the next generation and in supporting our daily responsibilities.

Sincerely,

Susan Green, Director, Instructional Design
